Dianne Williams transcript

Working While Pregnant
We had what you call a patch and seal area in Indiana. And that was where the women would go that was pregnant, when they got to the point where they couldn’t do their duties. Then that’s where they would go and they would patch and seal repair mail, I mean damaged mail, or packages that had gotten damaged in the equipment. It was like a sit down job where you have a room full of people that are sitting down and just doing repair work on letters or packages. And yes, I did have some experience in that particular area, because I had two pregnancies in the post office. When I went in I only had one child and I had my other 2 children during the time I was in the post office.